In reference to my application to National President of ISU,

The highest position of ISU Norway requires constant, endless dedication. It requires an experienced mind willing to take risks, to take responsibility, to be accountable.

I have been the president of ISU Bodo for one year, and previously the Secretary of the same branch for one semester. I have learned many things all throughout, but essentially, it takes a village. The core of ISU is team work. ISU is a family.

But like I said, endless dedication. For the job, one needs to be social, charming, a negotiator. Organization is exceedingly important, so things run like clockwork, which can be done.

Besides my experience in ISU Bodo, I've also worked as a consultant for Nord University, helping to organize events for the University.

I am ready to step into the role and make the best I can from it, with the help of an amazing team and family.
